Six figure, statewide ad buy highlights Feingold’s atrocious record on national security

Let America Work (LAW), the Super PAC supporting Wisconsin Senator Ron Johnson, released a new television ad today called “Chaos,” which highlights reckless Russ Feingold’s atrociously weak record on national security. “Chaos” is a six-figure ad buy that will be seen by Wisconsin voters across the state beginning Tuesday.

“When Russ Feingold represented Wisconsinites in the U.S. Senate, he was notorious for his weak record on national security,” said LAW Senior Strategist Mark Stephens. “Feingold is infamous for being the only U.S. senator to vote against the 2001 Patriot Act, which increased terrorist surveillance after 9/11.”

“It is alarming that Feingold admires President Obama’s record on military and Foreign Affairs. Our military has been horribly weakened in the past seven years and the Feingold/Obama record on foreign policy has provided encouragement to our adversaries and enemies and undermined the trust of our allies and friends.”

“Russ Feingold should not be entrusted with the safety and security of our nation,” Stephens continued. “With the serious national security challenges facing America now and in the future, Wisconsin families simply cannot take another chance on ‘Reckless Russ.’”

“Chaos” comes days after a Marquette University Law poll shows the Wisconsin senate race is statistically tied. Let America Work released an internal poll in December 2015 also showing a statistical tie between Sen. Johnson and Feingold.

LAW previously released a digital ad, “Demanding Truth,” showing Sen. Johnson blasting the bureaucrats at the Veterans Administration and demanding answers following the explosive VA scandal and subsequent cover up.
